This collection in reference to the steamoat Washington has never been published by me, and I send them to your paper because the subject is of a local character, because the subject is of a local character, interesting to your citizens.

The Washington was a remarkable boat in her day, and was the sixth boat that was built to run on the Western waters, She had a high pressure engine and four single-flue boilers. From all the information obtained, it appears that Capt. Shreve designed the sugine and boilers. He is supposed to be the inventor of the cut-off cam, and was also the inventor of the appearatus for removing angerious the cut-off cam, and was also the inventor of the apparatus for removing anges from the channel of the river. In 1834 he built the suag boat that removed the celebrated raft on the Red River, hence the name Shreveport, called for him.

The steamboat Washington was built at Wheeling, W. Va., in 1816, Captain Henry M. Shreve; owners, Nilos Gillespia, Robert Clark, of Brownsville, Pa., Noah Zane and George White, of Wheeling, W. Va., and Henry M. Shreve. First enrollment at port of New Orleans, 1816; second enrollment january 12, 1821. A PRESENT FROM THE WHEELING LADIES. "The ladies of Wheeling presented to Captain Shreve a handsome flag, on which was embroidered the figure of Fame, holding in her right hand a trumpet, in her left a scroll on the side of which was this 'Our friends shall not withhold motto: 'Our friends shall not withhold what we have wrested from our enemies' [A good motto for West Virginia at the present date], on the other 'Don't give up the ship.' This motto alloudes to Livingston's vexatious claim to the exclusive right of navigation on the Mississippi River within the State of Louisiann. The forfeiture of other vexels is the negalty for strempt. the State of Lonisiann. The forfeiture of other vessels is the penalty for attempting to navigate incurred under the law of the Louisiana Territory conferring this extraordinary privilege. The company has a very good legal opinion from 1'. Doddridge, Esq., against the validity of Livingston's claim.
